World of Sport

By H. B. C.

A week ago several million people were interested in a "fight" down in New York. They were badly fooled. It turned out to be a contest between a mule and a grasshopper. The onslaught of Louis was so terrific that Schmeling was completely dazed and outclassed. In less than one round the mighty German was ready for the hospital. By half turning his back to the surge to escape the flying fist, the most vulnerable part of his body was exposed to the centre of the target. And his might just as well have been hit by the hoof of a mad mule. A bone was broken in the spinal hook-up. The German passed out of the fight picture quickly.

About a million dollars was paid to see this fight. It is a question whether the fans got the worth of their money. Probably most of them would have preferred to see some semblance of a contest instead of a slaughter by Louis, who did all the fighting, and condensed the act on into less than three minutes. The radios had hardly been properly tuned until the organ began to play that doleful music associated with funerals. The condition of Schmeling made the quite appropriate, for he was "dead" to the world.

Softball has ousted baseball in popularity. The figures are amazing. 65,000 persons witnessed softball games in the U. S. last year. 11,000,000 participated in games in 484 cities. At the three-day tournament in Chicago an attendance of 200,000 was not unusual. Yet this year is only the fifth year under organized auspices.

There are stars in softball that are cashing in on their ability, particularly in pitching. Matt Repert banked $40,000 last year. He holds a record of more than one hundred "no-hit" games. In baseball when that occurs they hoist a pennant and have a celebration.

The best feature of the popularity of softball is that it gets the boys and young men into a health-giving sport. The convention of Police chiefs held in Edmonton emphasized the crime-preventing tendencies of such group sports. The true reformers today are those who encourage the boys to vent their surplus energy in healthy sport. Of course that is what the leaders in Tuxis, Trail Rangers and Boy Scouts have said for a long time now. To spend more money on games and less on police is a grand idea. Boost it.

Forage Crops Field Day School of Agriculture, Vermilion, Mon., July 4

CORRECTION: The School of Agriculture, Vermilion, advises this paper that the correct date of the Forage Crops Field Day at Vermilion is Monday, July 4th, and not July 24th, as published in the rural papers recently. The School of Agriculture regrets the error in information which went out to the papers from the school office, and trusts that even at this short notice, all farmers who are especially interested in forage crops may be able to attend.

Provisional Unity Council Statement on General Declaration of Principles

(By T. B. WINDROSS)

Edmonton, June 27.—The political spotlight settled on the movement for united action in establishing sane, sound, progressive government in Alberta during the last week. The first meeting of the Unity Council (Provisional) under the leadership of John I. McFarland, was held Thursday and Friday with all members being present and unanimity of purpose evident in the proceedings.

The council went definitely on record as standing for absolute autonomy for the constituencies in the selection of their candidates for the legislature and the management of their own political affairs. The democratic character of the movement was stressed by speaker after speaker during the proceedings and Mr. McFarland himself declared in his opening speech that the movement to succeed must rest on the basis of the will of the people and sound democratic principles.

Council placed itself in its declaration of policy clearly in support of a policy of debt settlement, emphasizing the view that the private and public debt situation presented the main problem to be solved by any future government.

Mr. McFarland stated his sole purpose and aim was to serve the best interest of the people of Alberta as a whole and if it should be considered he was in any way in the way of success for the movement he would be ready instantly to step out of leadership. Among the principles of policy chosen by the council was that the leader of the party in the legislature should only be selected by the elected members themselves not by any political party outside the legislature.

It announced a policy that would foster and advance the unity of Canada as a whole and not weaken the bonds of confederation. Work of organizing constituency conventions and groups will be carried on largely by individuals interested in the movement as far as the initial start is concerned.

The general declaration of principles of the Unity movement accepted by the delegation is as follows: "The things which the Government that is to restore credit, confidence and self-respect to the people of this province must do, are infinite in detail but simple in principle.

"It must provide for the adjustment of existing private debts on the basis of the equities of the interest of parties and ability to pay, and for justice and equity between debtor and creditor in all future transactions.

"Public obligations must be honorably recognized and fairly adjusted, and when this is done, the burden can be lightened by taking advantage of lower current interest rates.

"It must recognize the fact that the payment of taxes is an investment in public service and that such service is strictly limited by the ability of the taxpayer to pay. Having this in mind it must be prepared to insist at all times upon the greatest measure of economy, consistent with justice and efficiency in every phase of public activity, including the make-up of the Legislative Assembly and the Government itself.

"When these matters have been faced honestly and fairly, the way will have been prepared for a greater measure of public benefit and service than can be realized in any other way.

"The Provincial Government, while maintaining its rights and fulfilling its responsibilities under the British North America Act as far as lies within its power, and within its constitutional limits, should work in co-operation with the Dominion Government, not only in the matters herein enumerated but in all matters which come up for consideration or action, in order to assist in the building up and fostering of the unity of Canada as a whole."

In its more detailed statement of policy suggested for constituencies, but not enforced arbitrarily, the council favors substantial reduction in members of the legislature and a lower seasonal indemnity of $1,000 instead of $2,000 received now by Social Credit members; institution of proper business methods in administration. It declared that in settlement of the private debt problem, "a moratorium does not solve debt problems, but merely delays solution."

The Social Credit caucus met again Monday and Tuesday and it is expected will decide on the date for a fall session of the legislature, probably in August; by the time this is printed the caucus will have concluded its deliberations and momentous decisions are reported to be in the offing as a result of its work.

There are rumors floating about Parliament Buildings, even among Social Credit sources of information, that strenuous discussions are likely at the caucus with considerable criticism of the government and Social Credit Board for what is considered by many rank and file members as the "ill-advised Saskatchewan adventure" for which blame is being laid on Major C. H. Douglas, Premier Aberhart and the Social Credit Board but insurances in the Social Credit caucus have often smothered before and that may happen again.

SOCIAL CREDIT

The regular meeting of the Irma Local Social Credit group was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. Knudson on June 14 with Mr. Milburn acting as chairman. The meeting was called to order and one verse of the theme song was sung. A large number of members were present. After the business was finished Mr. Mason gave an interesting talk on the work done by our present government. The meeting closed with God Save the King, after which lunch was served by members of the group. The next meeting will be held July 11 at the home of Mr. and Mrs. O. Lovig, Irma.

Death By Drowning

The drowning season has opened and during the next three months or more one may expect to read reports of tragedies occurring in lakes, rivers, creeks, sloughs and potholes in the prairie provinces. Even this early in the season, accidents involving loss of life have already been reported from more than one prairie point.

In many districts in the west the opportunities for death by drowning have been materially curtailed during the past few years on account of the drought which has resulted in rivers and sloughs drying up and many of the larger lakes have been so shallow that the risk of death in this form has been considerably reduced.

This year, however, with an abundance of rainfall throughout the west, rivers are running more rapidly, shallow sloughs and lakes are much deeper than they were and many depressions which have been dry for a number of years are now filled with water, multiplying many times over the risks of loss of life through drowning.

Hence, the necessity for greater precaution on the part of those who like to enjoy the pleasures of the water, whether in it as bathers and swimmers, or as in canoes and rowboats.

A Dangerous Element

As with the automobile on the highway, water may be and often is a dangerous element for those who are ignorant or careless of the risks they sometimes thoughtlessly run, and even expert swimmers are not always immune from death by drowning. For those who venture on or in the water there is no absolute guarantee of safety no matter how skillful or well trained they may be.

Because there is danger, however, the pleasures of the water should not be denied to those who wish to participate, but there are certain rules of conduct and certain safeguards which can and should be practised by all who bathe or boat.

The first and most important of these is ability to swim and swim well. Another is ability to handle a canoe with skill, and determination to refrain from horseplay while travelling in a canoe. A third is to swim only with the companionship of one or more good swimmers is available in case of emergency arising. And finally, every person who bathes or embarks on the water in canoe or boat should be master of the art of life saving in the water. Even when all these precautions are observed all risks are not entirely eliminated, for a sudden and deadly cramp may claim the life of the most expert swimmer, but he can be prepared for danger.

Even in the urban centres where many facilities are available for safeguarding against loss of life from such causes, such as life saving classes conducted under the auspices of the St. John Ambulance Association and other organizations, and tuition in swimming at the local Y.M.C.A. or civic bathing places, lives are occasionally lost.

How much greater is the risk in the rural districts where such facilities and instruction are not available and where, too frequently, the uninitiated plunge into the water and drown because they are not sufficiently acquainted with the sub-surface terrain, or because competent aid is not available when they get into difficulties, because they are unaware of the strength of the current and above all, because they have not been trained in the art of swimming or the craft of life saving.

Preparation Is Essential

Again for those who take their pleasure in or on the waters at summer resorts danger lurks for the unwary and particularly for those who are unprepared to cope with an emergency. A sudden squall upsets a boat and the occupants are tipped into the water or the occupants of a canoe get too frisky for their unstable craft and lives are needlessly lost because the pleasure takers are not strong swimmers or because the competent are dragged down by the helpless members of the party whom they attempt to rescue.

Enough has been said to demonstrate the necessity of preparedness for danger on the part of those who go down to the water to bathe or to ride on its surface.

Throughout the west the arts of swimming and life-saving should be thoroughly taught to the children and the youth by capable instructors under practical conditions wherever a suitable body of water is within easy access. Wherever feasible such instruction should be accompanied by demonstration, and practice should be included as one of the activities associated with the school, possibly after school hours or on Saturdays or other holidays. No person should approach adulthood or even adolescence without being given the opportunity to learn and practise the arts of swimming and life saving.

It is useless to forbid children the privileges of the community swimming hole. It is one of the greatest joys of the average normal, healthy child. On the contrary they should be encouraged to take advantage of the opportunities the district may afford for bathing and swimming but such activities should be practised under proper supervision to ensure that such pleasures are accompanied with every reasonable precaution for safety.

Question Is Settled

Five women out of six interviewed in Toronto did not think it was necessary, as a display of good manners, for men to remove their hats in the presence of a lady passenger in the elevator. After that verdict, the man who does remove his hat may be open to the soft impeachment of putting on swank or trying to make a hit.

A house at Pagan, Ark., was built around a tree stump. The stump now serves as both table and kitchen cabinet, compartments having been hewn out of it.

Two small children were working in the garden. The older boy "boasted" until the little fellow called "Mother, please come and speak to Jen as. He thinks he is a woman."

Always Polite

Once at a state dinner Mrs. William H. Taft found herself seated next to a certain foreign visitor who boasted on the extreme politeness of his countrymen. After pointing out at some length how they excelled Americans in this respect, he inquired proudly, "You admit it, don't you, Mrs. Taft?" "Yes," she replied, "that is our politeness."

At the tip of a lion's tail is a small, horny spur. At one time, it was believed that the animal "sprung" himself into action with this appendage.

Rice is a semi-luxury to 150,000,000 poor people in the Yangtze Valley of China, who eat it only on festive occasions, according to a recent report.

Loses Good Friend

Blind Man Mourns Death of Dog That Protected Him

A young man became "blind again" as an old dog closed its eyes in death at Morristown, N.J.

Buddy, first of the "Seeing Eye" dogs for the blind, had been brought home to die. And Buddy died.

The female German shepherd, suffering from the infirmities of age, expired after ten years of service as the "eyes" of Morris S. Frank, 30, blind globe-trotter.

Deprived, so to speak, of his eyesight, Frank stood over the body of his lifeless Buddy and said: "We did not expect her to die so soon. As I have not yet worked with the dog, that is to take Buddy's place, I feel that I am blind again. Buddy was my eyes."

There was irony in Frank's words. For Buddy herself was becoming blind from old age. Death spared her the affliction which she herself assuaged in her master.

Frank and Buddy had travelled 150,000 miles through the country together, spreading word to the blind that trained dogs could serve as their "Seeing Eyes." Their last trip was a return by plane from Chicago, so that Buddy could die at home, in the Morristown kennels of the Seeing Eye Organization, of which Frank is vice-president.

He became blind while boxing in prep school and since has devoted his life to training dogs for the sightless.

His grief was the more because his indebtedness to Buddy goes beyond sight alone. She saved his life in 1932, tugging him away from an elevator shaft in a Chicago hotel. The door was open, but the elevator had not arrived. Frank was about to enter when she pulled him back.

Buddy was given a private funeral at the Seeing Eye training school.

Naturalized Citizens

Must Conduct Themselves As Citizens Of Canada

Persons who come to Canada from other countries and accept Canadian citizenship should be made to realize they must conduct themselves as citizens of Canada and not of the country of their origin, R. Hon. R. B. Bennett, private leader, said in the House of Commons.

He referred to an interview reported in a North Bay, Ont., paper in which Vincent Scarpatura, described as an Italian, just returned from Italy, derided Canadian political institutions and protested Italian. He had also said England had to back down in the Ethiopian dispute or Mussolini would have sunk the British fleet.

The naturalization act provided for the revocation of the naturalization of any person who by speech or action showed himself disaffected or disloyal to the king. Mr. Bennett suggested that was a proper course to take with this man.

Hon. Ernest Lapointe, justice minister, said he would bring the matter to the attention of Hon. Fernand Rinfret, secretary of state.

Scheme Did Not Work

When his 47 tenants said they could not raise their rent money, Andreas Kopeon of Kahanau, Czechoslovakia, decided to "raise" them. He went to the cellar of the building and police found him busy with gunpowder, gasoline and a machine connected to a clock. He has started to serve seven years at hard labor.

Health Campaign

Unnecessary Sickness Is A Burden On The People Of Canada

Illness and unnecessary deaths cost Canada more than $600,000,000 a year, the Health League of Canada estimated as it urged a national health education campaign and more adequate use of known preventive measures.

Approximately two per cent, or 200,000 persons, of Canada's population are constantly ill and unable to work, the league said, although half that illness is preventable. It is estimated 34 per cent of Canadian deaths are "postponable."

"Science has already developed methods whereby sickness and death rates may be materially reduced, thus saving enormous costs which at present are unnecessarily a burden on the people of Canada," the league said in a submission made before the Howell commission.

"The solution of the problem of preventive medicine requires the application of specific methods, for example, toxoiding of children, pasteurization of milk, periodic health examination and the building up of adequate machinery in the way of properly staffed departments of health, adequate legislation, full-time health units in rural areas, etc. All such measures require expenditure by the dominion, provinces and municipalities."

Study Bird Life

Party Goes North On Behalf Of American Museum Of Natural History

In an effort to complete the collection of bird life specimens from the northern tundra for the American Museum of Natural History, a New York expedition headed by W. A. Rockefeller, museum patron, arrived in Winnipeg recently on the way to Churchill, Manitoba.

The personnel includes Raymond Potter of the department of preparation of the museum, and Fred S. Scherer, staff artist.

Mr. Rockefeller, particularly interested in the ornithological section of the museum, will carry out most of the field work during the weeks the expedition is in the north. Mr. Scherer's assignment is to photograph and paint in colors the habitat of the birds, while Mr. Potter is to mount the specimens for a large permanent exhibit to be set up in New York.

Turn About Fair Play

President Wilson Had Clever Reply To Woman From Florida

A woman from Florida approached President Wilson one day; and after the greeting, the President asked, "What can I do for you?"

"Oh, nothing at all," replied the woman. "I came from Florida just to see what a live President looks like. I never saw one before."

"That's very kind of you," replied President Wilson, laughing heartily.

"There's no reason why you shouldn't, since many of us in the North here go all the way to Florida just to see a live alligator."

An Unusual Accident

A sailor sitting on the topmast of a steamship in Nagoya bay was killed in a freak aviation accident. A passenger plane, with five aboard, struck the mast while taxiing to a landing, knocking the sailor to the deck. The plane dived into the sea and all five were saved.

She: "You know, every time I see you I am reminded of a famous and learned man."

He: "Really? Who is he?"

She: "Darwin."

This Club Is Different

Disillusioned Bachelors of Jugoslavia Urged To Be Tough

Claimed to be unique in Europe, a club of disillusioned bachelors has been formed at Kraljev, Jugoslavia. The club's rules stipulate no member may on any condition "seek solace in female company." The alternative is a heavy fine or expulsion. Pretexting against the growing flippancy of girls and young women in their love affairs, a manifesto urges a strong line of conduct from men. "Be tough whenever possible" is one of the rules of conduct for club members in their contact with women. The committee has asked bachelors of Jugoslavia to make it a national movement.

Giant Pre-Historic Tooth

A giant tooth of a pre-historic elephant has been found in a swamp by workmen digging the foundations for a building at Chilwick, England. The tooth measures eight inches in length, is five inches high and three and a half inches across and weighs nearly four pounds.

"Doesn't that mule ever kick you?"

"No, sah, he sin't yet, but he frequently kick de place where Ah recently was."

Purchase Whale Oil

Britain Steadily Adding To Her Stocks Of Food And Oil

Great Britain is steadily adding to her war stocks of food and oil. A whale sales ring in Norway has sold 34,000 tons of whale oil—the balance of its stock—for prompt delivery from a tank in Holland. Three weeks ago the ring sold 20,000 tons to Denmark. The value of the British purchase is $488,000 ($2,800,000).

When Oliver Stanley, president of the board of trade, moves second reading of the essential commodities reserve bill in the House of Commons it is expected he will lift the veil a little over these purchases of foodstuffs.

The bill authorizes the board of trade to establish reserves of any essential commodity either by inducing traders to increase their stocks or improve their storage facilities or by purchasing the stocks itself.

The bill does not cover all commodities. It includes those which, in the opinion of the board, are "food for man, forage for animals, fertilizers for land, any raw material from which these commodities can be produced, and petroleum and petroleum products."

Members of the commons have some odd ingenious plans for storage. Some would like to see disused coal mines used. There, in that subterranean gloom a mile down, it is argued, gasoline could be stored far from the reach of the most devastating air bombs yet known to men. Some would use caves burrowing deep in the limestone areas of central England.

Why Scouting Is Valuable

Because It Is Wholesome States Speaker At Banquet

"Scouting is wholesome," Mgr. T. W. Morton told 200 guests at a banquet of the Boy Scouts' Association of Canada, Winnipeg.

"The difference between scouting and every other youth movement is that scouting is wholesome and all the others are partial," he said. "Hitler, Mussolini and Stalin won't want whole men for citizens, they want partial men, developed only in a certain way, kept in a servile state and trained to be soldiers. That's why Hitler abolished scouts within a week after taking Austria," he continued.

Canadian business men should employ Scouts more and recognize that a Scout badge is a guarantee that a boy has learned the ground-work of a trade, he urged.

Most Popular Names

Elizabeth Heads List For Girls In Edinburgh Schools

Elizabeth, one learns on good authority, is the most popular name for girls in the Edinburgh schools. In most cases it is shortened to Betty, most cases it is shortened to Betty, while an occasional Lizzie still crops up. After Elizabeth come Margaret and Mary, while "Catherine"—usually shortened to Cathie, not Kate now-a-days—is also an extremely common name. Annie, Jessie, Jean, Janet, Helen, Christie, and Agnes also have a good innings.

Indine was accidentally discovered in 1811 by a French chemist who, in seeking a new form of gunpowder for Napoleon, treated calcium nitrate with the ashes of seaweed.

"I know all about the castle market," returned Punder. "You needn't tell me it's way down. Castle-peddlers have been ringing my bell for months. But Bingley is the place I want and Bingley is the place I'm blinking well going to get. It's not a matter of money. It's a matter of pride, see?"

"I see," said the earl in a pale gray voice. "No use asking, as man to man, for a sporting chance, I suppose?"

"No. My mind's made up. The legal papers are drawn. I got an architect fella in London right now working on plans to make the place over. I'll spend thirty, fifty thousand pounds altering it and amartening it up. And, say, you can keep this old stuff," he pointed his gloomy hat at a Sheraton chair. "I'm going to furnish my new home up-to-date."

"So I've a week in which to pay up?" said the earl. He spoke quietly, but Ernest could see that inside he was not quiet.

"One week. Seven days. Then out you go or the balliffs put you out," said Punder.

"Of course if I pay you the twenty thousand you'll be legally bound to turn over the notes, and Bingley Castle will not become Punder's Palace, is that not correct?"

"Correct it is," said Punder. "But I've looked up your credit, m'lad, and I can think of only one money-lender who might—I say might—let you have the money."

"Who?" queried the earl eagerly. "Old Dan Furber."

"Will you be so good as to tell me where I can find him?"

"Sure. Colney Hatch Asylum. Padded Cell No. Six," replied Punder, and guffawed like a croupy sea-lion.

Ernest, who had been suffering silently during the interview, sensed that the earl was about to crown Mr. Punder king of the castle with a cut-glass water carafe.

"I don't like your sense of humor, Mr. Punder," said Ernest.

"I don't like anything about you," replied the pickle tycoon.

"Have you anything more to say?" asked the earl.

"I fancy I gave his lordship a pretty clear idea of the program," said Punder, stroking the nap of his tail hat.

The earl shot up from his chair, carafe in hand.

"Then get the hell out of here, you gloating grampus," he shouted.

"And that goes for me, too," said Ernest, picking up a bronze paper-weight.

"Hail!" said Punder, getting up too. "I'll remember the words."

He made a mocking bow to Ernest and the earl.

"I'll be back," he said. "A week hence. Till then, adoo."

He strutted out, an invincible bull leaving an arena strewn with discomfited mastodons and plectors.

The earl relaxed his grip on the carafe. Ernest put the paper-weight back on the Jacobean desk.

"I don't care what you say," remarked the earl. "I simply cannot warm to Hubert Punder."

"Maybe we can do something," said Ernest. He said it to comfort the earl; but what could be done Ernest could not imagine.

"Maybe you can do something," Ernest, the earl said. "I've left no stone unturned. Neither has Mac-Kintock. Looks like the fall of the house of Bingley from where I sit. Punder is right. Only a gibbering lonly word advance me a cent—oh, I say, I don't mean you, dear boy."

But Ernest knew that the earl was counting on him as a kinsman and a friend.

"Funny how things happen," he heard the earl say. "One week from today is my birthday. I shall be 60. Having the birthdays in is hardly my idea of a birthday party. Oh, well, we'll just have our usual. Flowers have cut-worms, the Wyncoops have young Mervin, and the Bingleys have Punder. Life being what it is, I'm going out and pot geraniums."

He took off for the potting bed, singing "Here we go gathering nuts in May."

Ernest went walking with Lady Rosa. Down leafy lanes and across fields they walked, past farm and spinnery, till they reached Kingaleys' Cope and their oak tree. There, he climbed to their perch, sat there, talked. Rosa was in such a happy mood that Ernest could not bring himself to break the news to her that they were out on a limb figuratively as well as literally. He waited till they were back in sight of the castle before he told her about Punder's visit and Punder's promise.

"It looks black," Rosa said. "But it could look a lot blacker." And she smiled at him.

He knew that she, too, was depending on his aid in this crisis. He did not enjoy his dinner much that night, although there was plum-pudding.

Five days limped by. Ernest brooded, but out of his brooding no feasible plan came for raising the needed sum. He calculated that he'd have to stuff all the lions in Africa, all the tigers in India, and some dachshunds to earn it. The Earl of Bingley continued to pot geraniums, outwardly placid. And nearer drew the zero hour.

Just as the feathered songsters began to chirp the opening chorus to a new day, a figure emerged from Bingley Castle and be-lined for the village of Pennyton.

It was Ernest Bingley, all dressed up, and London-bound.

The misty morning was no grayer than his soul as he settled into a corner of a third class carriage. His luggage consisted of himself, nine shillings over and above his return fare, and a lunch he had extracted from the ice-box, a dollop of plum pudding and a lump of Cheddar cheese wrapped in a newspaper.

Some men there are in this corner of contrast to whom the feat of carrying a hundred thousand dollars presents no more difficulties than unbuttoning a vest. Ernest was not one of them. He ruefully reflected that he was descending on the financial centre of the sunless empire with no capital but a pocketful of pudding and cheese, sixpence and a worthy cause. He had embarked on this expedition with hardly more plan than a Sealymph pup.

In a quilt-bound reverie he had evolved one wildest notion, but, when examined in the morning light it looked decidedly anemic and unattractive. It was to seek out Ois G. Wyncoop in his London caravan and broach the subject of an international loan. Closer study of this project convinced Ernest that he had the chance of a terrapin in a whippet race. Ois G. Wyncoop lacked some of the social graces, perhaps, but his sagacity in money matters was a byword in the banking set; and more plausible promoters than Ernest had discovered that when Mr. Wyncoop's fingers closed on the throat of a dollar bit, no bulldog's grip was more tenacious.

One, in friendly candor, Mr. Slocum had said, "Ernest, you got no more idea of salesmanship than a saw-horse. You couldn't sell a swamp to a rich frog."

As the train clicked on Ernest grew surer and surer that Mr. Wyncoop was as likely to unbuckle as Mr. Punder was to relent. But to see and woo Wyncoop was his only hope. He continued to cling to it, trying to push from his eyes the probable expression on Mr. Wyncoop's face when he heard the proposal that he invest several million wienies in an old castle, and a castle which seemed to have ghosts the way bungalows have mice.

To divert his mind from his wagon-load of woes, Ernest began to read the day old newspaper which was wrapped around his lunch.

He skipped lightly over a story headed "Trouble in the Balkans," feeling that there was trouble enough in the Bingleys. As he was trying to decipher a report of a cricket match his eye was attracted by a familiar name in the adjoining column.

He read, SMASH-GRAB RAID FAILURE

BOY HANDS TRY FOR CROWN JEWELS

London.—Mervin Wyncoop, 13, son of wealthy American parents, tried to steal the crown jewels from the Tower of London yesterday morning. He threw a brick at the shot-proof glass case, and set off some fifty alarms. He was promptly

KNEES WENT STIFF IN HIS SLEEP

Agony To Move Them When He Awoke

"For three years," writes this City man, "I suffered with pains across the lower part of my back. In the morning, I awoke with knees so stiff that it was agony to move them. Special treatment would make the pain a little easier—but that was all. Then a friend recommended Dr. Kruschen, which my doctor said I might take. I began with about a coffee-spoonful first thing in the morning. To my surprise I found my rheumatic aches and pains disappearing. I kept on with Kruschen, and although I am more than middle-aged, I have been free from pain for two years, and able to go to my office every day."

Rheumatic conditions are often the result of an excess of uric acid in the body. Two of the ingredients of Kruschen Salts have the power of dissolving uric acid crystals. Other ingredients assist Nature to expel the dissolved crystals through the natural channels.

collared by the Best-Eaters, soundly spanked, and turned over to the police. The youthful desperado was armed with an air rifle. In Marlborough Street, police-court, Magistrate J. G. B. Morris fined Wyncoop fifty pounds, which his father paid. The boy was discharged on his father's promise to give him an old fashioned thrashing and leave the country at once. The angry parent, Ois G. Wyncoop, indicted the condign chastisement on the spot, and the bench retired.

"You are a better thrasher than your son is a brigand." (Laughter.) The Wyncoops left immediately by plane for the continent, destination unknown. Master Mervin made the trip standing up.

Ernest groaned. No longer could he lean on that frail reed. He turned to the want-ad columns, and wondered if he could fill the bill as "Footman," "Tail," "Sober," "Used to children," or "Cherish. Meat. Must know hats." He sighed. He was not tall or used to children, and, though neat, he knew no hats. The train clicked on. The day was dreary but it was bright and gay compared to Ernest.

A passenger entered his compartment.

"Bless my soul, it's old Ernest," said the familiar voice of the Earl of Bingley. "I didn't know you were going up to town."

"I didn't know you were, sir," said Ernest.

"I wasn't. I wanted to. Couldn't afford it. But good old Crum had backed a four to one shot that came in, and he let me have five quid."

"I didn't see you get on the train," said Ernest.

"I didn't exactly get on," said the earl. "I made it by a flying leap just as it was chugging away. Landed in first-class by accident, and the guard just guessed me out on purpose."

I say, I can assure you, you're going to London."

Ernest made no reply.

"Do you know London well?" asked the earl.

"Like the back of my neck—I mean my hand," said Ernest.

"I wish I could have you to lunch at my place," said the earl, "but I've a rather important engagement."

"Please give me my regards," said Ernest.

The earl snickered roughly.

"You must have his fling," he said, and adjusted his frayed Old Blue tie.

They parted at Paddington station. Ernest declined the earl's offer to split a taxi with him.

"I'm going Hyde Park way myself," said the earl, "but I've time to drop you at your destination."

"No, thanks," said Ernest. "I'm going in the opposite direction."

"Good-by then," said the earl. "And good luck."

Ernest did not set out immediately for his destination. Instead, though time was of the essence, he stood perplexed in Praed street.

That marvelous reformed monkey. Man, can tame the air-waves, spy out the secrets of the stars, and harness the thunderbolt; but there are two things no man has yet been able to do: One is to catch a ball before he throws it; the other is to go some place that isn't.

Credit For Turkey

Agreement Between United Kingdom And Turkey Has Been Signed

Great Britain is meeting Germany's economic thrust in the Balkans. Three agreements between the United Kingdom and Turkey were signed under which credits will be provided for the export to Turkey of £10,000,000 ($50,000,000) worth of goods manufactured in the United Kingdom.

Turkish orders for warships and other war material can be placed in the United Kingdom on credit terms, with provision of a guarantee for such credits by His Majesty's Government.

For A National Outlook

Says Sectionalism Has No Place In Canada

The voice of sectionalism is not the voice of the Canadian people, the Canadian Chamber of Commerce declared as it urged a broad national outlook in any change in dominion-financial arrangements.

"The average citizen feels he is primarily a Canadian citizen," the chamber said before the Howell commission. "The real outlook of the people of this country is national and not parochial or provincial."

"In view of existing conflict between the various governments over their respective powers the chamber submitted the time was ripe to re-emphasize the ideal of Confederation and 'work towards it by the application of greater centralization and simplification of government.'"

The chamber laid before the commission a series of specific proposals to that end. It advocated dominion insurance over insurance, labor regulations, old age pensions, security frauds prevention, relief and dominion collection of personal and corporation income taxes, regardless of how they were ultimately distributed.

It urged immediate solution of the railway problem but made no recommendation as to method, endorsed the principle of a national loan council and grants commission, suggested reduction of real estate taxes, stricter limitation of municipal borrowing and a plan of selected immigration.

The chamber insisted any readjustment in dominion-province relations should be carried out for the benefit of Canadians as citizens of Canada, rather than as interested residents of any particular province or district. The same Canadian elected governments in each government division and paid for their upkeep, so he was equally concerned with the financial position and efficiency of each.

"Advantage or disadvantage to him from government activities must be net gain or loss resulting from his relations with all governments," the brief said. "Therefore we believe that the common stock of Canadians bear in mind the standpoint of Canadian citizenship in any suggested plan of economic or financial readjustment. Canadianism should be the determinant in shaping recommendations." The central standpoint to be considered was that of the citizen rather than that of administrative bodies.

Longer Life For Fence Posts

Preservative Treatment That Will Prevent Decay

Preservative treatment to prevent decay and prolong the life of non-durable fence posts is recommended by the Forest Products Laboratories, Department of Mines and Resources, Ottawa. The kind of life of fence posts depends mainly on the species and the conditions of service. For example, cedar is naturally durable and will last for many years, but most of the common woods are not durable and in contact with the soil soon decay. Investigations show that many years of service can be added to certain species by simple and inexpensive treatment.

Crescote oil is the best effective preservative and will increase the service life of non-durable posts twenty years or more. Posts may be treated either full length or only butts with crescote oil by heating the air seasoned posts in hot oil, and then submerging them in cold oil. This treatment is known as the "hot and cold tank" treatment. A cheaper, less efficient treatment consists of dipping posts in hot oil. Where a tank is not available, two brushings with hot crescote, well brushed in, will add two or three years to the life of the posts.

Twelve to thirteen years of service life may be given air seasoned non-durable species by treating the posts with a 5-5 per cent solution of a preservative salt (zinc chloride, sodium bisulfide and copper sulphate) by the "hot and cold tank" treatment. This treatment is generally more effective than steeping the posts for several days in a salt solution. Freshly-cut posts may be treated by standing the butts of the green posts in a salt solution for a week or more.

A Double Meaning

An American and a Londoner were discussing business and business men, each claiming the superior ability for his own countrymen.

"Well," declared the New York man, "I've been coming to London regularly for the last ten years, and I've never met a week where I should call a sharp man of business."

"Very properly," retorted the Londoner. "You see, we've got all that sort in prison."

There are nine automobile manufacturing companies in Canada.

Music And Work

Use Radio In British Factories To Increase Efficiency

Experimental use of music in British factories as an antidote to fatigue and boredom of industrial labor indicates production may be increased 10 per cent. but that the treatment is deleterious to office efficiency.

A Wembley firm, which broadcasts radio music in its plant noticed an increase of 10 per cent. in production by women workers, but found its office staff considered the music a nuisance.

An investigator for the National Institute of Industrial Psychology found women laundering shirts and collars in Scotland to the strains of martial music. He described their output as "astounding, even alarming."

Scottish workers refuse to listen to jazz but many women employees in English plants prefer it and place marches second on their list of choices.

Industrial psychologists say it is dangerous to generalize on the question of music and work. They favor introduction of music but suggest each case should be considered on its separate merits.

Was Great Engineer

Golden Gate Bridge Was Best Work Of Late J. B. Strauss

Joseph Baermann Strauss, the engineer whose genius brought into reality the world's longest suspension structure, San Francisco's famed Golden Gate Bridge, and who died the other day in Los Angeles, was the builder of no many bridges in his lifetime that he could not remember them all. A believer that bridges do not have to be ugly to be efficient, Mr. Strauss sought always to incorporate the beauty of the skyscraper in his designs. He avoided networks of cables so as not to spoil the lines of his towers and was content to let steel speak for itself as an architectural material.

The greatest achievement of Mr. Strauss, whose fingers itched to "make things" while he was a school boy putting about machine shops in his native Wisconsin, was the $35,000,000, two-mile Golden Gate Bridge stretching across the treacherous waters of San Francisco's Harbor. That bridge is considered one of the finest engineering structures of man.—St. Thomas Times-Journal.

For Business Men

Eat Less And Sleep More In Advice Of Doctor

The average business man works too hard, eats too little and eats too much, Dr. E. Wallace Macadam of New York, told the 72nd annual Indiana Institute of Homoeopathy in Indianapolis. Dr. Macadam, Professor of Medicine at the New York Homeopathic College, advised: "Keep thin and take a little rest off every afternoon for a brief siesta."

A prisoner in Texas penitentiary penned a poem of nine verses and was then put to death in the electric chair. Without seeing the poem it is impossible to judge whether or not so seemingly harsh a penalty was justified.

Air mail records were broken when in one week 1,250,000 letters weighing 19 tons were carried between London and other countries.

It's a small world and a pretty densely-populated one, too. For every square mile of land on earth there are 39 persons.

Somehow we rather like spending money we haven't got, to buy things we can't afford, to give to people we don't like, who don't want them.

Night Possibly Be Right

Man In Tibury, Ontario, Has Queer Taste In Meat

Time dashes on but it can't change the seasons too soon for Israel Brust, 73, of the Tynanline, Tibury East, Ont. He wants the months to put in a rush scolding about the country he has sampled the rare viands of black birds, skunks, muskrats, pheasants, partridges, quail and wild geese.

"Ever eat skunk meat?" he asked during the interview. "Skunk meat is lovely. It's white and tender. I used to drink skunk oil for colds and it's also good for rheumatism. It has a fishy smell but I'd rather take it than cod liver medicine."

Long experience has taught him that muskrats are not to be despised in the animal kingdom. "They're the best animal in this part of the country," he declared. "I've ate lots of them. The meat is healthful and tastes like chicken—it's better than chicken because it's more tender. They're very clean. They wash all their food before eating it."

Graduated Fifty Years Ago

Five Women Who Received A.B. Degrees Honored By McGill

McGill University honored its first women graduates, when five of the eight who received bachelor of arts degrees 50 years ago attended a jubilee reception in Montreal.

Dr. Grace Ritchie England of Montreal, valdicator of half a century ago, acknowledged the commemoration. Fifty years ago, she said, many looked askance on higher education for women feeling "the heavy intellectual strain" might prove too much for the health of the students.

That view point is rather strikingly answered 60 years later, she continued, by the fact seven of the eight who composed the first class are living to-day, the sum total of their ages being over 500 years.

Reversed Migration

Birds Flying Wrong Way Startle Group Of Naturalists

Down in Canada's busiest bird sanctuary, Point Pelee National Park, migratory birds caused consternation among a field group of the Harrison Lewis project, when the birds were observed flying south instead of north. The group, headed by J. M. Spiers, of the Toronto University staff, spent several hours taking notes on the various flocks as they winged their way over Lake Erie from Point Pelee to Pelee Island. The indigo bunting and barn swallow were especially evident among the birds flying in the wrong direction.

Alberta Pro-Rating Plan Gives Oil Men Equality of Market.

In contrast with experiences in other new oil fields, producers in the Turner Valley have at all times enjoyed a good market at fair prices for their production. Of course the price was reduced somewhat when it became necessary to expand the market for Turner Valley crude. This had to be done to cover the additional carriage charges entailed by moving the oil further afield. Pipe lines, railways and refiners shared the reduction with the producers. The consumer benefited by substantially lower prices for products.

It was inevitable that the refiner could not immediately buy all the oil the Turner Valley could produce. So purchases were pro-rated to the needs of the market, but at all times every producer could enjoy his fair share of the market at a fair price.

Contrast this condition with Montana where, according to F.G. Cottle, Chief Auditor of the Alberta Board of Public Utilities Commissioners, who studied the situation in that state, some wells were operating at capacity and others were completely shut in because they had no market. This resulted in unstable conditions making it possible to buy crude oil at prices much lower than are being paid to the Canadian producer.

No such situation was allowed to develop in Alberta. — Cont.
